

ABSTRACT

An economical data processing system, including: a means to form a virtual space in use with a network which includes a plurality of computers connected to each other; a means to form virtual currency which represents a value index in the virtual space; and a virtual currency storing means to store the virtual currency. In the economical data processing system, the virtual currency is delivered in the virtual space.

Digitized by Google